Differential role of microglia and astrocytes in scar development of the lesion in the rat neonatal brain. It is well known that the lesion of the neonatal central nervous system (CNS) has a higher extent of scar formation than that of the adult CNS and that acute injury of the neonatal brain often leads to the development of posttraumatic epileptic seizures. The cellular mechanism of this scar formation is not entirely known. In this study, we investigated the developmental profile of the expression of the inflammatory cytokines interleukin-1beta (IL-1beta) and interleukin-6 (IL-6) and the presence of microglia and astrocytes in the lesion site of the rat neonatal brain. The lesion was induced by a standard cold lesion (7 degrees C for 20 min) of the right sensorimotor neocortex in 7- and 14-day-old rats, and the lesioned hemisphere was removed 3, 7, 14, or 21 days later. The expression of inflammatory cytokines and microglia and astrocytes in the lesion site of the neonatal brain was examined by immunohistochemical methods. In addition, the epileptiform activity and the expression of IL-1beta, IL-6, and IL-10 mRNA in the lesion site were examined by immunohistochemical double staining, reverse transcription-polymerase chain reaction (RT-PCR), and real-time quantitative polymerase chain reaction (RT-qPCR). The level of IL-1beta and IL-6 was minimal in the lesion at 3 days and rapidly increased after injury

I'm aware that you can just open the watch window when it stops on a breakpoint and set a variable to say: Module1.PageVisibility = "New value" to see it in a watch window, but is there any way to set a breakpoint so that the watch window can be set up to show all the variables in a module? A: If the variable you want to watch is not local to the code, there are several ways you can go about this. If you are referring to a module-scoped variable, the best method is to watch the Immediate Window. This allows you to write code like this: ?MyModule.[ModuleName].VariableName or ?MyModule.[ModuleName].VariableName and it will evaluate the expression and watch the variable. This isn't very practical for object-scoped variables, but it can be done that way. Write the expression like this: 'Add watch expression for this variable. VB.NET evaluates the watch expression 'and f678ea9f9e
